Hello, about your scientific article:

translators do not have much experience. As more and getting articles published in English, we only have English proofreader. Where can you translate the article - even if the language is not perfect - the editor put things in order. Another way is to find some fellow who has mastered English and help you translate the article in return for co-authorship. These are the only two ways for me at this moment has fallen on your head. Translation is indeed very expensive and would rather prefer to take advantage of other opportunities.
